

English Swelter in Heavy Coats; Palm Beach and Mohair Unknown

By DAVID L. BLUMENFELD
(United Press Staff Correspondent.)
New York, (by mail).—By Jove, it's hot.

That is what they are saying in London now. They think it's hot. It isn't really. Over here we should say, "What a glorious day," and revel in the cool breeze. But in London, "It's a jolly hot day," by George.

Of course, to Londoners, what we call a cool day seems like a furnace. They never get what we are having now. Still that does not prevent thousands of perfectly good Englishmen mopping their foreheads and in tube trains against the "awful" heat.

There are no such things as Palm Beach suits in England. People wear slightly thinner clothes in summertime—that's all. Why, if a man were to stroll past the Ritz Hotel in a white Palm Beach, or walk up Bond street at noon in a mohair suit, he would have a procession in his wake in less than no time. "Good Lord," people would say; "just look at that fellow. Must be mad—what!" And they would go home and tell their wives about it.

In the evenings the people sit out in the parks. No, they do NOT take off their coats. They tilt their hats just a wee bit to the backs of their heads, undo their top buttons, and think they are being delightfully daring.

Until I came to America I had never seen a man ride in a railway train without his coat.

If a few well-known men set the example of taking off their coats in English trains, everybody would do it. As it is, they think they are "not done." Probably the only offices in London today where people work in their shirt-sleeves are the newspaper offices. There they do it, winter and summer alike.

No British journalist is any good unless he works in his shirt-sleeves. That's a tradition dating back some thirty odd years. I fancy Mark Twain taught it to them.

Just now it's about 4 o'clock in London, and mothers and daughters and best girls and their best boys will all be making for Selfridge's store on Oxford street to get an "American ice cream soda."

Selfridge's is the only place in London where they can make a real sundae, and going to Selfridge's in the "heat wave" is an event—things date back from the last visit to that emporium.

"Let me see," mother will say, "when did Jack come home?" "Oh, yes, of course, the fifteenth. Just the day after that ice cream we had at Selfridge's."

Return From Motor Trip.
Miss Louise Dickinson, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas, Mr. Newman, Miss Effie Graham, 1002 University, and Miss Norma Haines, of St. Louis, returned last night from a motor trip to Moberly.
